Vince,William E. Sherlock,2005 The Evidence Collection handbook was developed with the special needs of both law enforcement officers and criminal justice students in mind The beginning of any successful investigation hinges on the proper collection of evidence. In many areas of the country responding officers may have to wait hours for laboratory resources to arrive at a crime scene or they may never have the benefit of expert assistance at all. In addition, even major metropolitan departments have limited laboratory personnel that can be sent to crime scenes. Therefore, it is essential that field personnel be prepared to competently identify and collect evidence for submission to a crime laboratory. The handbook is designed to serve as a quick reference on effective procedures for the collection, preservation, and transmittal of evidence for examination, analysis, and presentation at the time of prosecution. Divided into five sections: Evidence Collection covers 1. Crime Scene Incident Evidence Collection, Discusses various types of crime incidents and the typical evidence found at the scene; 2. Collection and Preservation of Evidence, Describes procedures for collecting and preserving 16 categories of evidence; 3. Transmittal of Evidence to a Laboratory, Describes procedures for forwarding evidence to a forensic laboratory; 4. Laboratory Analysis and Examination, Discusses techniques available at forensic laboratories for evaluating and analyzing evidence; 5. Glossary, Explains technical terms often used in forensic science.

Crime Scene Search and Physical Evidence Handbook Richard H. Fox, 1973 Crime Scene Search and Physical Evidence Handbook Richard H. Fox, 1975 Forensic Science Information Needs of Patrol Officers Eyup Aydogdu, 2009

Law enforcement personnel, especially patrol officers, have been criticized for ignoring or overlooking physical evidence at crime scenes. This study, conducted in a large American police department, was aimed to determine the perceptions of patrol officers, their supervisors, and administrators, detectives, and crime scene technicians about the forensic science needs of patrol officers. The results showed no statistically significant difference among the perceptions of said groups. More than half of the respondents perceived that 14 out of 16 areas of knowledge were important for patrol officers to have: crime scene documentation, evidence collection, interviewing techniques, firearm evidence, latent and fingerprint evidence, blood evidence, death investigation, information, DNA evidence, document evidence, electronically recorded evidence, trace evidence, biological fluid evidence, arson and explosive evidence, and impression on evidence. Less than half of the respondents perceived forensic entomology and plant evidence as important for patrol officers.

Crime Scene Investigation National Institute of Justice (U.S.). Technical Working Group on Crime Scene Investigation, 2000. This is a guide to recommended practices for crime scene investigation. The guide is presented in five major sections with sub-sections as noted: 1. Arriving at the Scene: Initial Response, Prioritization of Efforts, receipt of information, safety procedures, emergency care, secure and control persons at the scene, boundaries, turn over control of the scene, and brief investigator in charge; document actions and observations. 2. Preliminary Documentation and Evaluation of the Scene: scene assessment, walk through, and initial documentation. 3. Processing the Scene: team composition, contamination control, documentation, and prioritize, collect, preserve, inventory, package, transport, and submit evidence. 4. Completing and Recording the Crime Scene Investigation: establish debriefing team, perform final survey, document the scene, and 5. Crime Scene Equipment: initial responding officers, investigator evidence.
