Chemical Alert! Marvin S. Legator, Sabrina F. Strawn, 2010-07-05 In the 1978 Love Canal toxic waste crisis, concerned citizens did a far better job of evaluating the health of the community than did the professionals of the New York Health Department, asserts Marvin Legator. In Chemical Alert: A Community Action Handbook, he and coeditor Sabrina Strawn offer a step by step guide that can be used by any lay person or citizens group to determine whether a health risk exists in their area. Writing for the general reader with no scientific expertise, environmental, medical, and legal professionals instruct communities on the organizational and investigative techniques that will produce a valid scientific case.

study With these tools citizens living near petrochemical plants or waste disposal areas or who may have simply noticed a high incidence of certain health problems in their community can determine for themselves whether a problem really exists and seek remediation Given the reality that government agencies often lack the resources or the will to detect health hazards before they affect a community an informed citizenry should be its own best environmental watchdog

Environmental Epidemiology National Research Council (U.S.). Committee on Environmental Epidemiology,1991 Achieving Public Health Goals at Hazardous Waste Sites Amy Dale Kyle,1996 Playing with Fire John W. Sutherlin,Daniel Elliot Gonzalez,2021-04-15 Playing with Fire chronicles the ongoing struggle facing Louisiana families trying to live and work against the backdrop of corrupt politicians and corporate greed However the story presented here is relevant wherever low income disenfranchised people are not included in decisions about their health and environment This book examines the tale of Marine Shale Processors the world s largest hazardous waste company and the women who fought to protect their community and their children The lesson here is that a dedicated group of people fighting for what is right can win and it serves as an example for any community that wants to determine what their own environmental future Playing with Fire is a well documented account that provides lessons for communities government agencies and corporations It dispels the narrative that low income communities must settle for jobs at the expense of clean air and water and politicians and demonstrates that corporations that further trample on the rights of people will ultimately pay the price

Health Effects Associated with Solid Waste Disposal in Alaska Native Villages Susan Vibeke Maria Gilbreath, 2004 Solid waste management is severely deficient in many Alaska Native AN villages Little is known about potential health effects to residents of these remote villages with respect to solid waste disposal SWD In the summer of 2000 a retrospective cohort study with cross sectional components was used to evaluate the risk of experiencing self reported health symptoms relative to exposure to SWD practices in four AN villages Significant risks for symptoms were detected for residence within mile of a dumpsite odor complaints burning of trash frequency of burning number of visits to the dumpsite and subsistence practices Retrospective cohort studies were used to evaluate the risks of negative birth outcomes in infants whose birth records indicated maternal residence in villages that had been identified as containing dumpsites that pose an intermediate or high hazard potential to health Birth records from 1997 2001 were used to identify infants born to mothers who resided in AN villages with dumpsite rankings Negative birth outcomes examined first included low and very low birth weight preterm birth and small for gestational age SGA Mothers from villages with intermediate and high hazard dumpsites had a higher proportion of low birth weight infants than mothers from villages with low hazard dumpsites On average infants weighed less and pregnancies were shorter in mothers from villages with higher hazard dumpsites compared to the referent category No differences were detected across exposure levels for incidences of for other outcomes Rates of fetal and neonatal deaths and congenital anomalies in infants with respect to the hazard rankings of dumpsites were also examined The most highly weighted hazard factors were also used as predictors of adverse pregnancy outcomes No differences in rates were detected across exposure levels although adjusted estimates were positive in most congenital anomaly categories Infants born to mothers residing in villages with high hazard dumpsite contents were more likely to have other congenital defects than infants in the referent category Other hazard factors were not significant predictors for any outcomes examined These are the first studies to evaluate potential health effects related to open dumpsites and SWD practices in AN villages
