

Parts of a Flower! Flower Dissection

Essential Question:

What are the parts of a flower and what are their functions?

At a Glance:

Learners observe and dissect a flower to discover its anatomy and the how each part contributes to its reproduction.

Getting Ready:

Collect three or more different types of flowers for learners to observe and dissect. Simple flowers with easily identifiable parts such as gladioli, carnations, lilies, pansies, daffodils, peas, tomatoes, and beans are good plants to use. Composites such as sunflowers and daisies are more complex for young naturalists, but help them understand the differences in flower structure. Both fresh flowers and those that are starting to lose their petals are excellent specimens for dissection.

Background information:

Many plants (angiosperms) contain flowers where the sex cells are contained for the plant's reproduction. The stamen is the male organ for reproduction and is composed of the anther and filament (or stalk). At its tip is the anther, the organ that produces the pollen. Pollen is composed of fine grains that contain the male sex cells. The pistil is the female organ; its parts include the stigma, style, and ovary. During pollination, male pollen lands on the stigma, germinates and the sperm cells travel down the style, and fertilize the eggs in the ovary. The fertilized eggs develop into seeds. Sepals are the leaf-like parts under the petals. They are usually green and photosynthetic (able to produce food with the sun's energy). Petals can be all colors, shapes, and smells which serve to attract pollinators.

Procedure:

1. Divide the class into small groups. Each group has a plate or cup with three or more different flowers.
2. Learners begin by simply looking at the flowers and completing the I Observe section on their worksheet. See attached.
3. Introduce flower structure. Refer children to the flower diagram chart. Explain that each flower is unique with its own special beauty. While flowers are composed of the same

Location: classroom with tables for children to work in small groups

Objectives: Learners will

- 1) identify the different parts of a flower and understand their function.
- 2) understand the importance of pollen for plant reproduction.

Skills: data collection, observation, asking questions, analysis, communication

Supplies:

- 3 or more different types of flowers
- cups with water to hold the flowers
- hand lenses
- ruler
- toothpicks to use as probes
- worksheet: I Observe, I Wonder

Subjects: science

Time: 30 minutes
