Future Directions in Applied Linguistics Christina Gitsaki, 2011-12-08 The field of applied linguistics covers a diverse range of research and practice and has developed somewhat differently in various parts of the world due to variations in local socio cultural conditions needs and issues However this local diversity does not reflect a field that is incoherent but rather one which has a broad shared international agenda which is invigorated by the diversity brought to the field by local perspectives The papers in this volume represent some of the major global directions that research in applied linguistics is taking and shed light on how language is used to affect practice The aim of this volume is to explore some of the key methods and issues which are guiding applied linguistics into the future through an examination of these issues in local contexts thereby providing a basis for understanding the global directions the field is taking These directions follow two historically defined paths those related to educational studies and language teaching and those related to social issues involving language In the volume half the papers focus on the former examining issues of language teaching language teacher education and second language acquisition while the other half examine social issues related to language use bilingualism and multilingualism and language policy and planning The collection of papers presented in this book illustrates how these traditional themes are influenced by the rising forces of globalisation and the use of technology thus exemplifying both the new and old ways in which the study of language is realised

Wortham, Betsy Rymes, 2003 Over the years linguistic anthropological research has shown how classrooms are socializing institutions and how language functions as one medium through which this socialization is accomplished Early work in the field has captured the immediacy of social practice and language use in educational contexts and has created useful characterizations of variations in communicative competence The present work builds on the strengths of prior work showing how new theoretical concepts and empirical methods developed in linguistic anthropology over the last decade can further illuminate educational settings The authors introduce an updated Linguistic Anthropology of Education which recognizes that in the rapidly changing field of cultural production within which children and teachers operate today the exploration of multiple pre-existing forms of communicative competence is not enough This volume elaborates theory and illustrates the tools and practices of the Linguistic Anthropology of Education to account for today's research context in which the multiplicity of identity and the multiple ways language can be used to represent it have important ramifications for how learning and social reproduction emerge within educational contexts
