Lindberg, 2008 In psychology visual perception is the ability to interpret information from visible light reaching the eyes The resulting perception is also known as eyesight sight or vision The various physiological components involved in vision are referred to collectively as the visual system The visual system in humans allows individuals to assimilate information from the environment The act of seeing starts when the lens of the eye focuses an image of its surroundings onto a light sensitive membrane in the back of the eye called the retina The retina is actually part of the brain that is isolated to serve as a transducer for the conversion of patterns of light into neuronal signals The lens of the eye focuses light on the photoreceptive cells of the retina which detect the photons of light and respond by producing neural impulses These signals are processed in a hierarchical fashion by different parts of the brain from the retina to the lateral geniculate nucleus to the primary and secondary visual cortex of the brain The major problem in visual perception is that what people see is not simply a translation of retinal stimuli i e the image on the retina Thus people interested in perception have long struggled to explain what visual processing does to create what we actually see This book presents leading edge research from around the globe on this field Usable Usability Eric Reiss, 2012-06-28 The A to Z guide to spotting and fixing usability problems Frustrated by pop ups Forms that make you start over if you miss a field Nonsensical error messages You re not alone This book helps you simply get it right the first time or fix what s broken Boasting a full color interior packed with design and layout examples this book teaches you how to understand a user s needs divulges techniques for exceeding a user s expectations and provides a host of hard won advice for improving the overall quality of a user s
