Now your answer to the following questions on the passage below and use your knowledge of social studies.

... The factory owners did not have the power or capital [wealth] to take a factory job. They could only hire people who were ready to work for the wages offered to them. Even so these wage rates were, they were sometimes much lower than those people could earn in any other field open to them. It is a distortion of facts to say that the factories carried off the youngsters from the villages and the children from their play. These women had nothing to work with and [nothing] to feed their children. Their children were destitute [poor] and starving. Their only refuge was the factory. It saved them, in the strict sense of the term, from death by starvation. . . . – Working men from Thomas Nelson & Thomas W. Swanwick, From University House

Which statement summarizes the theme of this passage?

17a Factory owners created improved conditions

17b Factory owners profited to use child laborers

17c The factory system affected people in many ways

17d The factory system caused major social classes

Making the World Global Isaac A. Kamola, 2019-06-07

Following

World War II the American government and philanthropic foundations fundamentally remade American universities into sites for producing knowledge about the world as a collection of distinct nation states As neoliberal reforms took hold in the 1980s visions of the world made popular within area studies and international studies found themselves challenged by ideas and educational policies that originated in business schools and international financial institutions Academics within these institutions reimagined the world instead as a single global market and higher education as a commodity to be bought and sold By the 1990s American universities embraced this language of globalization and globalization eventually became the organizing logic of higher education In Making the World Global Isaac A Kamola examines how the relationships among universities the American state philanthropic organizations and international financial institutions created the conditions that made it possible to imagine the world as global Examining the Center for International Studies Harvard Business School the World Bank the Social Science Research Council and NYU Kamola demonstrates that how we imagine the world is always symptomatic of the material relations within which knowledge is produced

States, Markets and Wars in Global History Giulio Sapelli, 2023-09-30 This wide ranging book focuses on the economic and political changes that have taken place between the advent of globalization and the COVID 19 pandemic and assesses how this may bring about a profound reconfiguration of the global political system Sapelli considers a range of developments in different spheres from international to national politics military aggressions and worldwide political trends such as the rise of populism to illuminate the moment of neoliberal crisis in which we now live He argues that Europe and its institutions in particular no longer demonstrate a model of diplomacy and statesmanship with the rise of technocratic structures and elitism reflecting how an ideal of global convergence towards liberalism and democracy no longer holds true The book then considers how a new international order based on the reason of state can be brought about by global cooperation between the US Russia and China along with a return to properly regulated finance and a renewed focus on community in the wake of the coronavirus pandemic The book will be of interest to those working in international economics and international relations as well as academics of economic history and political economy
