

The background of the book cover is a composite image. It features a dark, dense network of tree branches and green leaves in the center. This central image is framed by two large, light-colored panels on the left and right sides. These panels have a grid-like pattern of small, dark, rectangular perforations, resembling a modern architectural facade or a screen. The overall color palette is dominated by greens and greys.

Evaluating Sustainable Development In The Built Environment:

Evaluating Sustainable Development in the Built Environment Peter S. Brandon, Patrizia Lombardi, 2010-12-01 The first edition was extremely well received providing an introduction and insight to this important topic in a comprehensive yet easy to read form It was chosen to be issued to the representatives of the organizations from the G8 and G20 countries attending the University Summit held in Turin in 2009 which addressed the issue of how education and research can assist sustainable development The second edition completely updated to reflect the significant advances and new insights that have been made since publication of the first edition focuses on two main issues Facilitating a dialogue between all stakeholders so that the complexity of the problem can be exposed structured and communicated Understanding how to assess progress in sustainable development It continues to provide coherent guidance on the techniques that can be used to assess sustainable development in a rigorous manner The approach is introduced using illustrations and case studies together with follow up references It remains the ideal starting point for those trying to get a handle on the subject and for those who wish to examine a structured and systematic approach to the evaluation of sustainable development in the built environment

Future Challenges in Evaluating and Managing Sustainable Development in the Built Environment Peter S. Brandon, Patrizia Lombardi, Geoffrey Q. Shen, 2017-04-05 Future Challenges in Sustainable Development within the Built Environment stimulates and reinterprets the demands of Responsible and Sustainable Development in the Built Environment for future action and development It examines the methods of evaluation the use of technology the creation of new models and the role of human factors for examining and developing the subject over the next twenty years

Evaluation of the Built Environment for Sustainability Vincenzo Bentivegna, P.S. Brandon, Patrizia Lombardi, 2003-09-02 Sustainability in the built environment is a major issue facing policy makers planners developers and designers in the UK Europe and worldwide The measuring of buildings and cities for sustainability becomes increasingly important as pressure for green sustainable development translates into policy and legislation The problems of such measurement and evaluation are presented by the authors in contributions which move from the general to the particular e g from a general framework for an environmentally sustainable form of urban development to a specific input output model application to environmental problems The book is divided into three parts the first covers city models and sustainable systems research programmes environmental policies green corporations and collaborative strategies to make urban development more sustainable part two discusses the problems of evaluating the built environment in planning and construction covering economic and environmental methods and construction development and regeneration processes part three illustrates a number of applications using different approaches and techniques and referring to a range of environmental aspects of the natural and built environment from maintaining historic buildings to transport management and air pollution monitoring
