The Edinburgh Review, Vol. 216 Harold Cox, 2017-09-17 Excerpt from The Edinburgh Review Vol 216 Or Critical Journal July 1912 October 1912 To Be Continued Quarterly As for the masses though in many cases their existence depends either on the products or the markets of India their education has been so arid and unstimulating that they can hardly be blamed if they concentrate their thoughts on sport or on wages and ignore the great continent which supplies the raw materials and consumes the finished articles of British industry The time may not be far distant when the working classes of England will be forced to take an interest in the awakening of India but for the present that interest is non-existent Thus neither among the well educated few nor among the ill educated many is there a sufficient grasp of India to enable the King's extraordinary achievement to be appraised at its full value There are wise men connected with the administration of India in England who have been thankful for this prevailing ignorance and have persistently deprecated any attempt to bring India nearer to the British public They know too well the limitations of British Parliaments and dread the impact of an ill informed and unimaginative democracy upon 315 millions of the most ancient and conservative races in the world About the Publisher Forgotten Books publishes hundreds of thousands of rare and classic books Find more at www.forgottenbooks.com This book is a reproduction of an important historical work Forgotten Books uses state of the art technology to digitally reconstruct the work preserving the original format whilst repairing imperfections present in the aged copy In rare cases an imperfection in the original such as a blemish or missing page may be replicated in our edition We do however repair the vast majority of imperfections successfully any imperfections that remain are intentionally left to preserve the state of such historical works
