Duncan, 2015-06-14 Excerpt from Commercial Research An Outline of Working Principles The theory of this book can be simply stated it falls readily into a series of propositions which have guided the writer from first to last in the composition 1 The immediate and primary need of business to day is intelligent direction and control individually generally 2 Intelligent direction and control of business can be had only by a better knowledge of business principles 3 A better knowledge of business principles can be if derived only from a careful and comprehensive survey of business facts 4 To secure a careful and comprehensive survey of business facts is a problem for business research 5 Therefore the immediate and primary need of business to day can be met only by business research This means also that the research work so well begun in the field of production should be carried over into trade into buying and selling The beginning and the end of every business enterprise is a marketing problem The problems of
