

ries is based on. A new development must directly reflect this challenge in these times of increasing costs. The new POS receipt printer therefore uses several basic approaches to keep increasing cost pressures under control:

1. Lowpower mode

The Epson TM-T88IV can use a power saving mode and this is a direct help in reducing costs. A simple, well-proven DIP-switch lets the user change over to the power saving mode. This gives the user full control and also keeps the power costs as low as possible.

2. Remote maintenance function

The "Maintenance counter" function monitors the running of the unit. This makes line-feeds, cuts and running time transparent. The user can see which POS station takes the most at any time or if the unit needs cleaning. This minimises maintenance costs and the amount of time needed for it.

3. Robust construction

The retail market is becoming increasingly aware of the significance of the total cost of a product over the full working life (TCO). The TM-T88IV was further enhanced to meet tough POS demands and will stand out as a real bargain thanks to its extreme durability.

More than 3 million of the TM-T88 family of printers have been installed since the 68-range was first launched. Thanks to its reliability and consistent print quality it can be found in every post office and at many well-known discounters and retailers not only in Germany.
