Distribution And Development A New Look At The Developing World:

Distribution and Development Gary S. Fields, 2002-07-26 Most of the world's people live in developing economies as do most of the world's poor. The predominant means of economic development is economic growth. In this book Gary Fields asks to what extent and in what circumstances economic growth improves the material standard of living of a country's people. Most development economists agree that economic growth raises the incomes of people in all parts of the income distribution and lowers the poverty rate. At the same time some groups lose out because of changes accompanying economic growth. Fields examines these beliefs asking what variables should be measured to determine whether progress is being made and what policies and circumstances cause some countries to do better than others. He also shows how the same data can be interpreted to reach different even conflicting conclusions. Using both theoretical and empirical approaches Fields defines and examines inequality, poverty, income mobility and economic well-being. Finally he considers various policies for broad-based growth. Copublished with the Russell Sage Foundation. Development and Distribution Andy Sumner, 2018-07-03 Since the Second World War surprisingly few developing countries have experienced a truly sustained episode of economic and social convergence towards the structural characteristics of the advanced nations. East Asia has exceeded most regions in its achievement of convergence and much has been written on comparative industrialization and development in North East Asia. Less discussed is South East Asia and the surprising and inclusive transformation several of its countries have undergone. Development and Distribution focuses on South East Asia and more specifically on Malaysia, Indonesia and Thailand. These three nations have all undergone a major transformation in a way never anticipated from being poor agrarian countries to middle income countries with developed industrial and manufacturing bases. How did Malaysia, Indonesia and Thailand achieve such a transformation and how did they achieve the transformation with a form of economic growth that was driven by structural transformation but that was inclusive? Given that historically it has been thought that structural transformation tends to push up inequality whilst inclusive growth necessitates static or even falling inequality this last point is particularly salient to developing countries. Understanding how the transformation was possible in a relatively small space of time, the extent to which it was inclusive and the caveats and prospects for South East Asia is thus an area of enquiry significant to all developing countries as they seek economic and social transformation.
