huge unfinished agenda for dealing with undernutrition and the communicable childhood diseases These developments have intensified the need for better information on the effectiveness and cost of health interventions To assist countries to define essential health service packages this book provides information on disease control interventions for the commonest diseases and injuries in developing countries The decision was made to go ahead for two reasons First because the combined insights of economists epidemiologists and clinicians could give valuable guidance in the difficult choices facing decisionmakers in developing countries aid agencies and the World Bank Second because for the most part other reviews did not systematically assess the cost effectiveness of available interventions

Department of Economic and Social Affairs, 2007 Greater longevity is an indicator of human progress in general Increased life expectancy and lower fertility rates are changing the population structure worldwide in a major way the proportion of older persons is rapidly increasing a process known as population ageing The process is inevitable and is already advanced in developed countries and progressing quite rapidly in developing ones The 2007 Survey analyses the implications of population ageing for social and economic development around the world while recognising that it offers both challenges and opportunities Among the most pressing issues is that arising from the prospect of a smaller labour force having to support an increasingly larger older population Paralleling increased longevity are the changes in intergenerational relationships that may affect the provision of care and income security for older persons particularly in developing countries where family transfers play a major role At the same time it is also necessary for societies to fully recognise and better harness the productive and social contributions that older persons can make but are in many instances prevented from making The Survey argues that the challenges are not insurmountable but that societies everywhere need to put in place the policies required to confront those challenges effectively and to ensure an adequate standard of living for each of their members while respecting and promoting the contribution and participation of all
