

Introduction

Intended to inspire and inform to equal measure, this book is primarily written for students of design seeking to balance real-world problem with postulate about design methods and material and manufacturing specifications for industrial production. No single approach to concept origination or design development is prescribed. Rather, the book's necessary and correct aim is to engender exposure and relative thinking around function, aesthetics, material selection, manufacturing and component geometry. This book also provides an insight into furniture design for those considering a tertiary education in product and industrial design.

Furniture Design: An Introduction to Design is a book that provides a comprehensive overview of the design process for furniture. It covers the entire process from concept to production, including the selection of materials, the development of a design, and the manufacturing process. The book is written for students of design and for anyone interested in the design of furniture.

While creating a new design is a challenging process, it can be a very rewarding one. It is a process that involves a lot of creativity and problem-solving. It is a process that can be very fun and interesting. It is a process that can be very rewarding.

One of the most important aspects of furniture design is the selection of materials.

The materials selected for the construction of a final will inevitably be different, depending on the job - if you make - and the budget. Modern Furniture in Canada Virginia Wright, 1997-04-05 Canada's furniture history includes hitherto unrecognized work of international significance in modern design. In this richly illustrated study Virginia Wright brings such accomplishments to the fore employing archival photographs and original documentation to trace the development of professional furniture design education and design advocacy in Canada from 1920 to 1970. Chief among the milestones were the production in Ontario in the mid 1920s of moulded plywood seating for assembly halls and the world's first moulded plastic furniture produced in prototype by the National Research Council in 1946 three years before the more famous designs by Charles Eames in the United States. Within a narrative framework Wright charts the development of modern design from its first appearance in an Eaton's department store with pieces brought from the Paris Exposition of 1925 through its stealthy entry into Canadian homes to its establishment as a dominant style. She shows how the introduction of modern industrial materials such as steel tube, rubber and plywood into the production of commercial and institutional furnishings and their incorporation into modern decor reached a wide public through exhibitions and the media. Wright also reveals the relative neglect of this facet of Canada's art history by its museums and galleries which after featuring new furniture made in Canada failed to acquire any for their own permanent exhibitions or study collections. The first account of Canada's innovative furniture design and fabrication of the period Modern Furniture in Canada 1920 to 1970 opens the door to a whole new field of study. American Cabinetmaker and Upholsterer, 1928 Which Degree?, 1985
