maneuvers guide is a compilation of standard flight training maneuvers and procedures for the typical training single engine fleet. It is designed to provide standardized procedures for each flight training maneuver listed in typical light aircraft and flight training courses. This reference guide's main benefit is in chair flying. Chair flying allows pilots to mentally run through the procedure and maneuver while at home. The brain's capacity to imagine and visualize the procedure is far more impressive than most give it credit for. A student pilot who spends considerable amounts of time chair flying will greatly outperform those who don't. Chair flying cements the procedure for the various maneuvers in the pilot's brain so that when done in the airplane, time is not wasted trying to remember how the procedure goes. Each maneuver will include a list of references indicating where further information about the maneuver may be obtained. The references should be used to help develop a complete understanding of each maneuver before attempting them in flight. Along with an understanding of the completion standards and common errors. The Second Edition includes changes resulting from the release of the Commercial Pilot ACS.

Autogenic-Feedback Training Improves Pilot Performance During Emergency Flying Conditions

National Aeronautics and Space Administration (NASA), 2018-08-16. Studies have shown that autonomous mode behavior is one cause of aircraft fatalities due to pilot error. In such cases, the pilot is in a high state of psychological and physiological arousal and tends to focus on one problem while ignoring more critical information. The effect of training in physiological self-recognition and regulation as a means of improving crew cockpit performance was examined. Seventeen pilots were assigned to the treatment and control groups, matched for accumulated flight hours. The treatment group comprised four pilots of HC 130 Hercules aircraft and four HH 65 Dolphin helicopter pilots; the control group comprised three pilots of HC 130s and six Dolphin helicopter pilots. During an initial flight, physiological data were recorded for each crewmember, and individual crew performance was rated by an instructor pilot. Eight crewmembers were then taught to regulate their own physiological response levels using Autogenic Feedback Training (AFT). The remaining subjects received no training. During a second flight, treatment subjects showed significant improvement in performance, while controls did not improve. The results indicate that AFT management of high states of physiological arousal may improve pilot performance during emergency flying conditions.
