

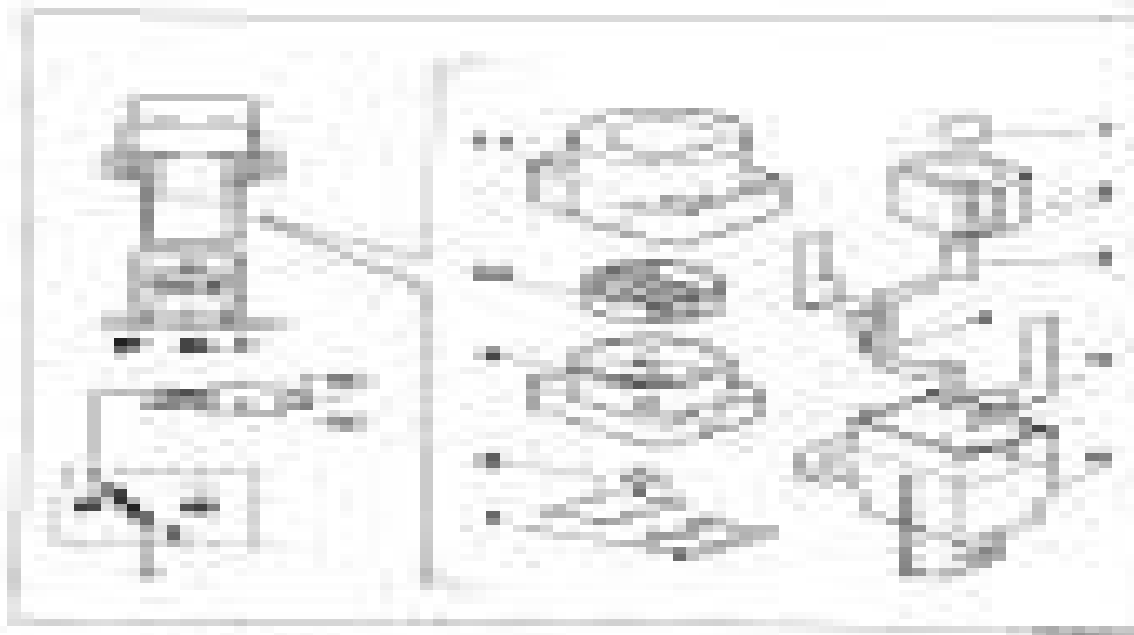

Diagram illustrating the greenhouse effect. Light rays from the sun enter the greenhouse and are reflected back inside, warming the interior.

Greenhouse Effect and Global Warming

The greenhouse effect is a natural process that warms the Earth's surface. When the Sun's rays hit the Earth, some of the energy is reflected back to space, and some is absorbed by the land and oceans. The land and oceans then warm up and release heat into the air. The air warms up and releases heat back to the Earth's surface, creating a cycle that keeps the Earth warm.

Global warming is the result of an increase in the greenhouse effect. This is caused by the release of greenhouse gases, such as carbon dioxide, into the atmosphere. These gases trap heat and prevent it from escaping into space, leading to a rise in the Earth's average temperature.

The effects of global warming are widespread and include rising sea levels, more frequent and severe weather events, and changes in the distribution of plants and animals. It is important to take action to reduce the release of greenhouse gases in order to prevent further global warming.
