

Coronary Artery Disease

A client is seen at the women's health clinic for a routine checkup. The client reports that she is experiencing fatigue, vaginal bleeding, and occasional heartburn.

Section 1

Physical Assessment

The client is alert and oriented x 3. Her complexion is pale and skin is warm to the touch. Her height is 5' 6" and weight 200 lbs (90.72 kg) with a body mass index (BMI) of 30. She describes her symptoms of vaginal bleeding as intermittent and moderate. The client was diagnosed with diabetes mellitus two years ago and takes oral antidiabetic medication. She reports heartburn that occurs on a daily basis and coincides with eating acidic foods like tomatoes. Exercise such as walking is impossible for her because of the generalized weakness and fatigue she experiences on a daily basis. She states that her lower left leg feels sore and tender and the nurse notices a red rash with a swollen appearance on the anterior portion of the leg. The client says her pain level is more like discomfort, but rates it as 4 out of 10. The nurse's initial focused assessment identifies the client at high risk for coronary artery disease (CAD) and notifies the healthcare provider (HCP). A lab screening and diagnostic tests are prescribed by the HCP and the nurse schedules the client for a complete coronary artery disease screening.
